

Over the rainbow: renewable generation predicted to double

Businesses should look to benefit from predicted growth in renewable generation market

EDF Energy predicts that the UK's renewable generation market will double in five years. Renewable generation is expected to reach 75TWh of output by 2017, contributing roughly 20% of the UK's total generation capacity. By 2017, 64% of renewable generation will come from independent generators and businesses producing their own energy onsite. This means that renewable energy produced on businesses' own premises will fold increase four fold as they double their share of output to 38%. Those businesses new to generating their own power should look to strategies employed by more experienced generators to improve their returns.